Amazon, a company that many would consider an expert in e-commerce and logistics, tested the market and left about a year ago. Stamos said that 90 percent of his online orders come from Grubhub and that the company has been forcing him to pay "extraordinary commissions." He said that he's been trying to get off the delivery apps since he started his restaurant five years ago but that the pandemic has dramatically tightened the squeeze. Other restaurateurs have also complained — and attracted the attention of city politicians. After a photo of a Chicago restaurant's Grubhub statement showed a dramatic cut taken by the delivery company, the city mandated that third-party apps must be more transparent about their fee structures in receipts to customers. When you choose to target deliveries, opening the app and going to the home screen will show you a blue "go" button. Now, it's a problem, leaving restaurants to try to persuade their customers to cut out the app-based convenience. And that might be possible. The app will be the hub where you accept deliveries from. Salary rates, however, largely vary by city and hours worked. Additional Uber Eats Driver Requirements Photo Courtesy: Tang Ming Tung/Getty Images Uber Eats also requires its drivers to provide documentation to aid in the background check process. Failing to accept the delivery request on time will prompt the request to go to another driver. Once you are at the location for the order you accepted, it is important to confirm that the correct order was prepared for your arrival. If you have not done so already, download the Uber app. There will be the largest variant in this fee for all your orders, as it looks at the distance you traveled from your pickup and drop-off destination also. Since the consumer handles the financial transaction, the only thing that will be given to you is the item for delivery. "They are willing to switch." David Singh, owner of Mesa Pizza Company in Santa Barbara, California, said that after the pandemic hit, working with Grubhub quickly became untenable because of the various commissions and fees. You are awarded a pickup fee for picking up the item for the consumer, a drop-off fee for delivering the food to the consumer, and a distance traveled fee. With Uber Eats, your pay is broken down into three different brackets. Preparing your profile will give you the opportunity to choose how to get paid and even switch the navigation system you want to use. After delivering the order, you will swipe right on the app and the process will be finalized. How Much Do Uber Eats Drivers Typically Make? Photo Courtesy: Sergio Monti/Eye Em/Getty Images The average rideshare driver salary stood at $18.65 per hour, with an average per-mile rate of $1.33 per hour, according to a study by Gridwise. "Online apps such as GRUBHUB ARE CHARGING US 30% of each order and $9 or more on orders made using phone numbers on their app or website ... please help save the restaurant industry by ordering directly with us." Restaurateurs like Stamos are mounting guerrilla campaigns to persuade customers to skip the delivery platforms they say are squeezing their businesses at a particularly difficult time. Stamos estimated that he's printed over a thousand notes since the pandemic closed his dine-in options. Uber is also reported to be in talks to buy Grubhub, a combination that would give the united company as much as 48 percent of the delivery market, according to analysis from the data analytics company Second Measure. Download the NBC News app for full coverage and alerts about the coronavirus outbreak. Some restaurant owners say that despite the fees, the apps provide a service they can't replicate on their own. He said many customers have said they were unaware of how much delivery apps were hurting his business until he added his note. "People are like, 'OK, hey, I didn't know that,'" Stamos said. If you choose to accept the delivery, the app gives you 15 seconds to click on the notification and later sends you directions to your destination. If you choose to become a driver, the pickup and delivery process allows you to set your own hours and become available for delivery at your convenience. Despite his having cut the cord on apps, Singh said, business improved and customers reacted positively. "Those that got educated have come and told us: 'Thank you so much. The Sarkissian family shared their March Uber Eats statements with NBC News, which showed that the app accounted for roughly a third of all the restaurant's revenue." At this point, I think we're just trying to stay above water, just trying to make it work," said Sarkissian, her voice cracking. With cars, any two- or four-door car is accepted by Uber Eats, as long as it is no more than 20 years old and is registered and insured. A scooter must also not be more than 20 years old and have a motor under 50cc. Uber, the popular rideshare program, allows users to order food and goods through their delivery program, Uber Eats. MORE FROM ASKMONEY.COM When Pitax and Sticks, a Greek restaurant in Brooklyn, New York, gets an order from Grubhub, owner John Stamos gives each bag a personal touch, printing out a small note with a simple message: Grubhub orders are killing his business. "Small businesses like us need your support in this time of crisis," Stamos writes in each note. However, Uber Eats still needs drivers to deliver those goods. The process will ask for you to submit the information that is necessary to complete a background check. After you are approved as a Uber Eats delivery driver, it is essential to set up the preferences you want to use to work and receive your earnings. Confirming this information is crucial in ensuring a successful delivery. You will receive an estimated time of delivery. Once this process is complete, the app will give you access to accept deliveries. If you will be working in an area where bikes or scooters are eligible methods of transportation, then you must be at least 19 years old to deliver via scooter or 18 to deliver via bike. The company also requires at least one year of driving experience. The delivery companies also have their own fleets of insured drivers and deliverers, eliminating the need for restaurants to hire their own couriers. For users, the apps offer a convenient way to find, order and pay for delivery food that might not otherwise be available. That worked for many restaurants when it was a small part of their businesses. Washington, D.C., San Francisco and Seattle recently capped fees from delivery companies at 15 percent. If you're thinking about working as an Uber Eats driver, here's what you need to know. How Does Driving for Uber Eats Work? Photo Courtesy: Halfpoint Images/Getty Images Uber makes its mobile application simple to use. "It's very hard as a restaurant owner to walk away with all the hard work you put in. In early May, the company released results from the first three months of 2020, which showed an increase in customer orders but a decline in profit. Uber Eats hasn't fared much better despite considerable growth. Neither company responded to questions about restaurants' concerns. Restaurants use apps like Grubhub, DoorDash and Uber Eats to streamline payment processing, customer support and various marketing services. Since your account will be new, you will need to register and complete the required documentation. Vehicle Requirements Photo Courtesy: Wittahaya Prasongsin/Getty Images Every city has different methods that can be used for deliveries through Uber Eats. When they do, your phone will beep and have a notification from the Uber app showing the location of your new pickup and delivery. Grubhub, which also owns Seamless, and DoorDash are the biggest services, with Uber Eats and small competitors like Caviar also in the mix. But few of them have figured out how to make much money. This is awarded to you on a per-mile basis. New York City capped delivery commissions at 20 percent. Spokespeople for Grubhub and Uber Eats said their companies are against caps. Some are looking to use social media to get the word out or coming up with special offers. If your city typically has heavy traffic, it will impact the distance traveled fee also. Being that the app prepares the pickup and delivery for both you and your consumer, there is no need to communicate with them directly. It's very hard." This includes proof of residency in your city, state, or province; proof of your vehicle insurance; a valid US driver's license; and a driver profile photo. Once you complete the requirements to aid in the background check, all that will be required of you is to keep a mobile device in hand to assist in your orders and secondary items you may choose to take such as a cooling bag to keep the items warm. Being your own boss is a dream for many, but knowing the steps to get there makes the process easier. Apart from a car, your city may allow you to use a scooter or a bike. "It's more accessible for them to just click on Uber and order from them, because they don't have to go through the hassle of doing anything else." However, to get repeat customers off the apps, she and her family have begun placing postcards in orders encouraging customers to order directly. Once deliveries become available, the app will display them for you. Many restaurants have had to close their doors to customers, while others have turned to food delivery apps such as Uber Eats and Grubhub to fill the void. That's meant a sudden focus on delivery companies and the broader food delivery economy, which has faced its own difficulties. When you do arrive, there might be a note indicating a preferred method of delivery such as contactless delivery, where the item is left at the door, or with a roommate. Others are ditching the apps altogether. Full coverage of the coronavirus outbreak. Outside a Bareburger restaurant in Brooklyn, a new sign appeals to passersby: "Support your local restaurants & order directly with them." A sign on a Bareburger restaurant in Brooklyn asks people to skip delivery platforms. Jason Abbruzzese / NBC News Restaurant owners are trying to figure out ways to stay in business during the coronavirus pandemic, which has hammered their industry. Grubhub, which is based in Chicago, has tried to balance increasing its support for restaurants while managing its own balance sheet. If you run into a traffic delay, the app will adjust the expected delivery time and you will face no penalty. Nora Sarkissian, co-owner of Aslan Catering in Los Angeles, said that she's thought about quitting the delivery apps numerous times but that the range and delivery workers are hard to pass up. Sarkissian said she has come to begrudgingly accept the app business model, describing her feeling as "people want to go this route." During the pandemic, most people order online," Sarkissian said. Photo Courtesy: Juanmonino/Getty Images Whether it's to make a quick buck or start a full-time career, becoming an Uber Eats driver is a way to start earning income while working from home. The app will allow you to choose your preferred method and show you the methods available in your city during your signup. Steps to Becoming an Uber Eats Driver Photo Courtesy: jayk7/Getty Images If you decide to become an Uber Eats driver, the steps are simple. He and his son updated the front page of their website decrying Grubhub and took out sponsored posts on Instagram slamming delivery apps, listing the fees and charges that inflated the cost of the food. Singh took similar action on his own Yelp page, writing "HELP US survive by CALLING in your order for PICK UP." Shortly after he put the message on the internet, Singh ended his contract with Grubhub. We always wondered why these cost us so much," Singh said. Food delivery isn't a much better business for the companies. How Old Do You Need To Be To Drive for Uber Eats? Photo Courtesy: simon2579/Getty Images Uber Eats requires you to be the minimum driving age in your city to be able to work as a driver.
